EDUCATIONAL POLICY AND COMMUNITY STUDIES

The Department of Educational Policy and Community Studies at UWM provides students with a deeper understanding of education and community contexts in urban areas. The department offers a Bachelor of Science in Community Engagement and Education (CEED).

Students often choose to focus their coursework in one of the following areas:

- Alternative Education/At-Risk Students
- Child Care (Educator or Administrator Track)
- Community Organizing for Social Change
- Policy and Leadership in Community-Based Organizations
- Urban Education
- Youth Work

Students, past and present, are employed by charities, hospitals, schools, community-based organizations, and local government units in metropolitan Milwaukee. The Department does not offer licensure for teaching in K-12 public schools, but many graduates either seek post-baccalaureate certification or teach in private schools.

The degree program helps those working in schools and the community better understand the social and political contexts of their jobs and provides a range of skills for better addressing the challenges they face. Students can also select one of four optional submajors: Child Care, Community-Based Organizations Policy and Leadership, Child and Family Services, or Community Leadership. Students may seek certificates in Community Organizing, Community-Based Organizations & Leadership, Community Leadership, and Youth Work. Licensed teachers may seek an add-on state DPI certification in Alternative Education.

The Bachelor of Science degree in Community Engagement and Education is also available as a second degree option. Candidates for a second degree must satisfy all current requirements for an undergraduate degree for the degree program. Some of the requirements may be met by transfer credits. Students must complete at least 30 credits in residence at UWM after the date on which the first degree is awarded. If more than 30 credits are needed to complete all degree requirements, the last 30 credits must be completed in residence.

Students in the department come from a range of educational and community-based backgrounds. Our students and alumni include state and local elected officials; community organizers and developers; personnel in human resource institutions, including program planners, outreach workers, and administrators; teachers and directors of community day care programs; youth workers in community and group home care; teachers and directors of alternative schools; and directors of community-based organizations.

The Department also offers a master’s degree program in Cultural Foundations of Education with areas of concentration in educational foundations and multicultural education, focusing on sociological, historical, philosophical, and other frames of reference. Many of the same focus areas that are available in the CEED BS program can be pursued at a more advanced level in our MS program. Additional information about the master’s degree program is available at https://uwm.edu/education/academics/cultural-foundations-edu/.
