

EDUCATIONAL PSYCHOLOGY

The Department of Educational Psychology prepares psychologists, counselors, researchers and educational professionals to effectively promote educational research, learning and development, and mental health in urban environments. We aim to prepare counselors, psychologists, researchers, and educational professionals who 1) have a foundation of knowledge about the bio/psycho/social bases of behavior, 2) are culturally responsive to and understand the unique developmental, contextual, and systems approaches in urban settings and environments, 3) can become scholars with applied research skills in their area of specialization, and 4) demonstrate the knowledge, skills, and values of their chosen area of specialization.

Students may pursue a Master of Science or Doctor of Philosophy in Educational Psychology in one of four concentration areas: cognitive and developmental sciences, educational statistics and measurement, school psychology, and counseling psychology (school counseling and clinical mental health counseling). The Department also offers certification sequences to qualify students as school psychologists and school counselors.

Undergraduate students may take courses in Educational Psychology toward various certificates or toward the minor in Counseling. The minor is available to undergraduates from other majors, such as Psychology, Nursing, Criminal Justice, Communication, and other areas in which students are interested in developing counseling skills.

The Counseling Psychology and School Psychology specializations at the master's and doctoral level are accredited by the American Psychological Association (APA).
