Information Security, Graduate Certificate

Graduate Certificate in Information Security
The Graduate Certificate in Information Security will prepare students to address the growing threats arising from cyberattacks and information privacy intrusions. Students learn how to assess risks to the security of proprietary information in an organization and how to articulate the technical, organizational, and human factors associated with these risks. Students will learn how to evaluate information technology tools designed to protect against information security threats and assess the impact of security policies on existing complex systems and organizational objectives.

Graduates are well prepared to oversee the information security life cycle of an organization, including planning, acquisition, development, and evolution of secure infrastructures.
