FOREIGN LANGUAGES AND LITERATURE

The Department of Foreign Languages and Literature, formed in 1996, teaches modern and ancient languages, their literature, and the linguistic and philological study of these languages. The broad departmental structure encourages the development of cross-disciplinary academic undertakings.

The University’s Foreign Language course requirements may be satisfied through coursework in the following curricular areas:

Arabic

Arabic courses may be of particular interest to students in the Certificate in Middle Eastern and North African Studies, the International Studies major, the Linguistics major, and the Global Studies degree program. A minor in Arabic is also offered.

Chinese

Courses in Chinese also may be of interest to students pursuing the Asian Studies Certificate, the International Studies major, and the Bachelor of Arts in Global Studies. A Chinese major can be completed through the Committee Interdisciplinary major; a Chinese minor is also available.

German

Students who have had no previous training in German should enroll in German 101. Those who have studied German in high school should take the placement exam in German, administered by the Testing Center, before enrolling; the exam is required for those who have had two or more years of high school German. After consultation with the department, a student may enroll in a course one level higher or lower than the one recommended by the placement examination. Both a German major and a minor are available.

Japanese

Courses in Japanese may be of interest to students pursuing the Asian Studies Certificate, the International Studies major, and the Bachelor of Arts in Global Studies. A Japanese major can be completed through the Committee Interdisciplinary major; a minor is also available.

Korean

Courses in Korean may be of interest to students pursuing the Asian Studies Certificate and/or the International Studies major. The Department offers a four-semester sequence in Korean.

Slavic Languages

The Slavic Languages program offers coursework in Polish and Russian. Through the study of these languages, students gain exposure to the literature and culture of the eastern European areas in which these languages are spoken. The program offers a major in Russian. In addition, the Slavic languages are an integral part of the Russian and East European Studies Certificate Program.

Classics

The Classics program offers instruction in the ancient Greek and classical Latin languages and literatures and in the civilizations of Greece and Rome. Courses offered in the area of classical civilization do not require a knowledge of Greek or Latin.

Students planning to pursue graduate study in classics and related disciplines, or teaching certification in Latin, should consult with the Classics Program coordinator early in their undergraduate career.

Students interested in a Classics major may also want to consider the Ancient Mediterranean Studies Certificate.

Hebrew/Jewish Studies

The Department of Foreign Languages and Literature, in cooperation with the Center for Jewish Studies, offers a major in Jewish Studies. Students may choose between two tracks: Hebrew Studies, which requires proficiency in the Hebrew language and focuses on the texts and history of early Judaism, and Jewish Cultural Studies, which focuses on modern Jewish culture and history. Hebrew/Jewish Studies students also may be interested in the Comparative Ethnic Studies and the Religious Studies programs as well as the certificate program in Middle Eastern and North African Studies.
